What is the Proposed Q’ályə ta Kukwis shichdild mi (Jordan Cove and the Bay of the Coos People) Traditional Cultural Property Historic District?

The proposed Q’ályə ta Kukwis shichdild mi Traditional Cultural Property Historic District is a 20-square mile area that follows the general horseshoe shape of the Coos Bay Estuary. The proposed district includes portions of the cities of Coos Bay and North Bend and Coos County. It contains 158 historic "contributing" properties associated with the history, culture, and beliefs of the Coos people, including two buildings and 156 places, or "sites." Non-historic "non-contributing" properties include roads, the airport, bridges, commercial properties, residential buildings, outbuildings, yards, gardens, agricultural lands, and industrial operations, etc., not specifically identified in the nomination document. These types of properties are not associated with the history, culture, and beliefs of the Coos people.

The proposed district is eligible for listing in the National Register for the resource's association with the continued use of the estuary since time immemorial to present, as demonstrated by archaeological sites, named places in Hanis and Miluk dialects of the Coosan Language, and the presence of prehistoric and historic burial sites of peoples at former villages and subsistence sites of Native Americans.

What is the Proposed Q’ályə ta Kukwis shichdild mi (Jordan Cove and the Bay of the Coos People) Traditional Cultural Property Historic District?

The proposed district is being nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places by the Confederated Tribes of the Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians (CTCLUSA). The CTCLUSA submitted a draft nomination for the proposed district to the State Historic Preservation Office on November 1, 2018 for consideration at the February 22, 2019 meeting of the State Advisory Committee on Historic Preservation.

The National Register of Historic Places, Historic Districts, and Traditional Cultural Properties

The National Register of Historic Places is the United States' official list of buildings, districts, structures, sites, and objects important to local, state, or national history. The program is run by the National Park Service and administered locally by the Oregon State Historic Preservation Office, an office of the Oregon State Parks and Recreation Department (OPRD).

A historic district is an area or neighborhood that has a concentration of sites, buildings, structures, or objects with associated landscape and streetscape features that are at least 50 years old. To be eligible for listing in the Register, a district must be significant and an identifiable entity that is important for historical, architectural, engineering, or cultural values.

A Traditional Cultural Property (TCP) recognizes the cultural significance and identity of a living community. A TCP not only tells the stories of the people who have historically called the area home, but recognizes how the descendants of those people keep the traditional practices and beliefs alive. For this proposed nomination, the Coos People are the living community. Jordan Cove and the horseshoe-shaped estuary are the area the Coos people call home, and the nomination documents the many ways this living community has continually kept their traditional practices and beliefs.

How do I Support or Object to Listing the District in the National Register?

Private property owners holding fee-simple absolute title to real property within the historic district may object to listing a district in the National Register by submitting a notarized statement to the SHPO certifying that the individual is the sole or partial owner of the property and that they object to the listing. The proposed district will not be listed if a majority of the property owners object.

Each owner of private property in a district has one opportunity to object regardless of how many properties or what part of the one property that individual owns, and regardless of whether the property contributes to the historic significance of the proposed district. Per federal rules, objections by divisions of government, including schools and fire districts are not counted toward the total needed to prevent listing a district in the National Register.

The opportunity to object is described more fully in the federal regulations, Chapter 36 of the Code of Federal Regulations, Section 60. A link to these regulations may be found at: https://www.epa.gov/ntr/regulations.htm

The Oregon State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) provides the following forms as a courtesy. Owners are not required to use SHPO forms in order to object.

How Does the National Register Process Work?

Any person or organization can nominate a property or district for listing in the National Register of Historic Places by submitting a nomination to the Oregon State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO). A complete nomination for a historic district includes the nomination form, property list, maps, photos, and exhibits. Once received, SHPO staff reviews the document for completeness, and then provides the preparer with a memo, if needed, outlining required changes to meet the minimum standards set by the National Park Service and making suggestions to improve the document.

Nominations that meet the minimum standards are forwarded to the State Advisory Committee on Historic Preservation (SACHP), a nine member, governor-appointed body of citizens with expertise in fields relating to historic preservation. The nomination document is also provided to the local government for comment.

At its meeting, the SACHP considers comments by local officials, staff, and interested citizens and recommends to the SHPO and the National Park Service to accept or reject a property or district for listing in the National Register, or defer the nomination for future consideration. Only the National Park Service can list a property in the Register.

What Does Listing in the National Register Mean?

Owners of properties listed in the National Register choosing to take advantage of federal and state tax benefits and grant programs must comply with federal standards. Oregon State law requires local governments to review proposals to demolish or relocate properties listed in the National Register. Local governments have the authority to form local historic districts and landmarks, and may also create additional protections for properties listed in the National Register through a separate local process.

To find out more about how your local government may regulate National Register listed properties, please contact your local planning office.
