Tribal Election Forum's provided opportunity to hear from candidates before election day.

Forum's were held on March 24th and 25th, 2018. Candidates had the opportunity to attend the Forum's for Tribal membership to ask questions.

Tribal Election Day was April 8, 2018. The polls were open in Tribal Hall from 12 (noon) to 4:00 p.m., after which the Election Board and third party Isler CPA tallied votes and posted results.

All three positions up for vote were filled by new Tribal Council members. In Postition #2 Debbie Bossley, in Postition #4, Josh Davies, and in Postion #6 Doug Barrett.

Thank you to Beaver Bowen, Tara Bowen, and Aaron McNutt for their time served on Council, and the work that they contributed to the Tribe.

Please check next months edition of The Voice of CLUSI for an introduction to your new Council Members as they begin their leadership of and service to the Coos, Lower Umpqua, & Siuslaw Indians.

Tribal Youth Had Tons of Fun at Spring Break Camps

Opportunity for Public Comment on Tribe’s Tribal Estuary Response Plan

Those attending the May 20 Tribal Council Meeting will have an opportunity to learn about the Tribe’s Tribal Estuary Response Plan, which will inform the Tribe how to properly respond to hazardous substance releases or oil spills within the estuaries of the Ancestral Territories and areas of interest. The Plan will help Tribe respond, review and assess spill impacts to Tribal health and the environment. The Plan will also help us keep Tribal members informed of relevant safety and health issues. There will be a public comment period following the introduction of the Plan during the Council Meeting.

This Month...be on the Lookout for Sitka Spruce Tips

Contributed by Ashley Russell, Water Protection Specialist

Plant description: Sitka Spruce is in the family, Pinaceae, the Pine family. Other culturally significant plants that also belong to the Pine Family are: Douglas fir, Port Orford cedar, shore pine, western hemlock, and western red cedar. This prickly evergreen rarely grows far from saltwater and are so wind tolerant that they grow to giant proportions, reaching heights upwards of 300 feet tall and widths of up to 16 ft. The bark of this tree is thin and flaky, and the green/reddish cones grow to 2-4 inches long and contain thin, flexible scales.

Food: In mid-late spring, Sitka Spruce needle buds emerge, packed with vitamin C and can be eaten fresh or steeped as a tea. The new needles should be gathered when they are first bursting from their bud sheaths, as this is when they taste the best. Douglas fir and hemlock tips can also be eaten or utilized as a tea.

Fiber: The roots of Sitka Spruce are very strong and durable and were utilized in a variety of baskets and traps. They also made good ties for dip nets and bundles of dried meat.

Other: The hoop-and-pole game sometimes utilized young spruce trees along with vine maple.

Technology: Bowls and cups were often times carved out of spruce and polished with a rough stone inside and out. Small shovel-nosed canoes were occasionally carved from spruce as well.

Opportunity for Public Comment on Tribe's Tribal Estuary Response Plan

Those attending the May 20 Tribal Council Meeting will have an opportunity to learn about the Tribe's Tribal Estuary Response Plan, which will inform the Tribe how to properly respond to hazardous substance releases or oil spills within the estuaries of the Ancestral Territories and areas of interest. The Plan will help Tribe respond, review and assess spill impacts to Tribal health and the environment. The Plan will also help us keep Tribal members informed of relevant safety and health issues. There will be a public comment period following the introduction of the Plan during the Council Meeting.

Weaving Workshop Updates

Dear Tribal Community,

Our April weaving and gathering workshops were lovely this year!! The highlights were a medallion made by Talice Russell, Ashley starting her first cooking basket as a part of her weaving apprenticeship, it will be for making tea, Tyson Russell coming to his first workshop, Kristy Petrie working with cattail and sedge on a new basket, visiting with Doc and Deb Slyter, digging kinnikinnick with Mark Petrie out at the North Spit, a first foods lunch with salmon and nettle, and welcoming home three historic baskets to our tribal collection. Here they are pictured with some dance caps I made for the youth who have attended the weaving workshops to wear at this year's Salmon Ceremony.

The gathering season for weaving materials has begun! This month we will begin to build our cache of materials for the coming year. Saturday we will gather our plants around the Reedsport area and then traveling to Lake Marie to clean them and have a pick-nick. Sunday we will be gathering in the South Slough and then returning to Tribal Hall for a Salmon dinner. During these gathering workshops you will learn appropriate sustainability and cultural protocols for gathering, a general understanding of the specific plants and habitats that we will be interacting with, a historical perspective on the places we will be visiting from our tribal perspective, as well as the complete steps to properly process these plants to make the best weaving materials from them.

May 26: Triangle Sedge and Tule
May 27: Dyes, Cat Tail, Spruce Root

You will need to wear pants, rubber boots, and have garden gloves, clippers, and lifejackets for children. Lunch will be pot-luck style. If you do not have some part of those materials they will be provided for your use for the day.

Because we will be around rivers and bogs, only one child per parent is permitted. If you would like to join in these field trips, please RSVP to sarasiestreem@hotmail.com by May 20th for more detailed information regarding meeting times and location.

I am looking forward to gathering with you!

Best,
Sara Siestreem (Hanis Coos)

Spring Break Adventure Camp 2018

Contributed by Mark Petrie, Cultural Assistant & Tobacco Grant Coordinator

This year for Spring Break, the Tribe created two separate camps: Discovery Day Camp for ages 5-12 and Adventure Camp for ages 13-18. The Discovery Day Camp was held at the Community Center in Coos Bay, while the Adventure Camp was at Camp Cleawox, the Girls Scout's Camp just north of Honeyman State Park in Florence.

This year our tribal cousins, the Coquille Tribal youth and staff, attended Adventure Camp. Each year many of our Tribal youth attend the Coquille's Camp Ta Nae; which builds lasting friendships and connections that bring strength to both of our nations. Activities throughout the week consisted of canoeing on our ancestral lakes (Munsel Lake, Siltcoos Lake, and Tahkenitch Lake) each morning, followed by cultural activities in the evening including: pine nuts aprons, wraps, drums, medallions, clacker sticks, shinny, storytelling, and singing. Wednesday was extra special in that we were able to have dinner with Tribal Council at the Tribe's very own Ocean Dunes Golf Course before their business meeting. On the last day of camp, the campers kayaked on Cleawox Lake before departure.

Jesse Beers, Camp Staff:

"It was an honor to once again be a tl'i'nyawa or ma'atii, to steer a canoe for the youth. I always enjoy the opportunity to get in the canoe and dig deep but it is good that more of us are stepping in as steers-people in the canoes. A ma'atii sits in the back of the canoe and not only physically steers the canoe with their larger paddle but also guides the pullers by encouraging them, giving them breaks, assuring balance and ballast is maintained, preparing them for what's ahead, pushing them to pull harder if needed, and providing a song or levity if that's needed. Without our pullers we ma'atii cannot achieve much of anything. Everybody in the Canoe has a place and is just as important as anyone else. Pulling in the canoe is all about healing, it's all about accomplishing something together, it's all about good hearts, it's all about leaving nothing behind but blessings in the water, chii taiyuu. My hands are up to all our youth and staff who pulled for our Elders, both with us and passed, that never had the opportunity."

Shayne Platz, Camp Staff:

"It was truly inspiring to watch our tribal youth participate in canoeing on the lakes surrounded by the beautiful Siuslaw National Forest. It was also impressive to watch young campers listening to tribal stories being told around the campfire, learning tribal songs, making bonds with other tribal children, and while having fun, gaining some cultural knowledge along the way (e.g. canoe protocol, history of the region, regalia & drum making, tribal stories). I have a feeling the adventure camp experience served to energize many of the young campers to look forward to more Spring and Summer Camp Adventures."

Doug Barrett, Camp Staff:

"I am so glad that we still do these camps to engage with our youth and have them coming back to keep learning. It is an honor to be a part of a great team to support our Youth. It is long hours and hard work but very rewarding at the same to see everyone having fun while learning. This was a great camp for everyone involved!"

James Barton, Camp Staff:

"Was really great to see new campers that were enthusiastic about learning our tribal culture and history. I had a great time with everyone!"

Ashley Russell, Camp Co-director:

"Being able to pull on our ancestral lakes in our traditional dugout canoes for the first time in over one hundred years is one of the most exhilarating moments of my life. Bald Eagle was even in approval as he followed us on our adventure all week. The most memorable moment, for me, was scavenging for floating eagle feathers as we paddled on Siltcoos Lake. I also have to add that paddling to Chief David Brainard's property on the Siltcoos and asking permission to come ashore, Canoe Journey style, was such an honor. Good weather and great company made Adventure Camp such a success. I can't wait for our canoe crew's next adventure!"

Mark Petrie, Camp Co-director:

"We had a fantastically smooth week at camp: the weather was the best we could have asked for in March, the camp facilities and activity areas were amazing, and the staff and youth were great! It's always inspiring and heartwarming for me to see bonds between people grow and grow into lasting friendships. My hands go up in thanks to everyone who made camp a success this year!"

Environmental Day at Discovery Day Camp

Contributed by Adrienne Kirk, Tribal Resource Response Specialist

During Environmental Day on the first day of Discovery Day Camp, campers participated in a scavenger hunt and beach cleanup at Horsefall Beach. For the scavenger hunt, campers identified native and invasive plants, beachcombed for shells and the like, as well as for environmentally harmful materials like styrofoam and plastics. The chaperones also carried plastic bags for additional garbage found on the beach. The purpose of the activity was to teach the campers about native and invasive species and introduce them to the concept of brownfields, because the Tribe has a program specifically for brownfields. A brownfield is a property that is actually contaminated or perceived to be contaminated by an environmental contamination, like toxins or oils, that may pose health and safety risks to the surrounding community. Typically, a brownfield is not a beach, but may be an abandoned warehouse or a corner gas station, a mill site or an abandoned mine—places where you might imagine there being hazardous contaminations. Our Tribe has a program for brownfields to make sure our lands aren't contaminated to the extent it might risk community health. Regardless of where the brownfield is, the first step in conducting a brownfield cleanup is assessing the property and looking at the environmental conditions (stains, rust, smells, holes, leaks, trash, etc.) and then the final step, being that it does pose a risk to human health, would be to clean it up! We had such a fun time cleaning up the beach!

Discovery Day Camp 2018

Contributed by Meagan Davenport, Family Services Program Assistant and Morgan Gaines, Communications Specialist

The 2018 Spring Break Camps were a little different this year for CTCLUSI. For the first time ever two different camps were held: Discovery Day Camp for ages 5-12 and Adventure Camp ages 13-18.

Discovery Day Camp, held at the CLUSI Community Center, kicked off bright and early Monday morning with Oregon Master Beekeepers- "The Bee Guys". Max and Rick came to teach the campers about everything bees. We were able to view the inner workings of a beehive, including the Queen, and Max and Rick graciously answered lots of questions about all the different species and their importance to our environment. Following the lunch hour, Adrienne Kirk with the DNR Department, led the campers out to Horsefall Beach, where she conducted a fun-filled scavenger hunt/beach cleanup. The campers hunted for wild strawberry plants, sand dollars, sea kelp, and other natural resources. We also did our best to bring home any plastic bottle caps and Styrofoam we found.

Tuesday morning brought excited faces, as we headed out to South Slough Estuary Reserve. We began with a presentation about life in the wetlands, and moved on to a hike. We were taught how to identify skunk cabbage, trillium flower, salmon berries, and many more traditional resources. One highlight of the hike was learning about the woodpecker, and how they not only get sap from trees, but also use that sap to catch bugs in the holes they peck - returning at the end of the day to that same hole to snatch up their tasty treats. Upon leaving South Slough, we made our way to the North Bend Bowling Alley, where we had a delicious lunch followed by many fun games of bowling.

The CTCLUSI Dental Staff came to visit the campers bright and early Wednesday morning. DHAT (Dental Health Aide Therapist) Naomi Petrie planned four fun-filled activities to teach the campers the importance of good dental hygiene. The campers learned proper brushing techniques, along with the difference between "natural" sugar and "processed" sugar, and their effects on enamel. After the Dental Staff left, the campers had a healthy sack lunch and played on the playground to get the wiggles out before our "Movie Day." The campers watched "Coco" an animated movie about the importance of culture, ancestry, family and following your dreams. When the movie ended campers were able to play outside on the playground, play card games or color. There were some intense games of Uno to be had that afternoon!

Thursday was an eventful day for The Campers! We had a field trip to the Pottery Company, in downtown Coos Bay and the campers were given the choice to paint mugs, bowls or magnets. Campers were so well behaved and showed extra care around all of the ceramics. It was so neat and the staff enjoyed seeing all the creativity shine through. After we painted pottery we walked to the Outdoor In and had pizza for lunch. The Campers greatly enjoyed using the tokens to play in the arcade. The bounce house and play structures were also a huge hit.

Once the wiggles were bounced out and left at the Outdoor In, the campers enjoyed learning more about their native heritage at the Coos History Museum. Through great discussion, the campers were able to learn about other Oregon-based tribes, as well as see artifacts from their own traditional territories. The campers left Thursday evening with the anticipation of a possible "surprise" awaiting them for the last day of camp.

Friday morning was full of crafts and painting. The campers painted monsters made from popsicle sticks, and anything else their heart desired (including themselves).

After a "Carnival Style" lunch was served, the surprise was revealed that the last half of the day would be spent playing games, eating cotton candy, face painting and cake walking. In addition, the campers grouped up to learn how to make "moon sand". Each camper got to take moon sand home along with carnival prizes - ending the First Annual Discovery Day Camp on such a great note.

Each morning campers were met with a snack, and each afternoon camp was ended with a Talking Circle, where we discussed our favorite discovery for the day, one nice thing about another camper, and what we were proud of ourselves for.

Campers visited the Coos History Museum and learned more about their own culture and viewed artifacts from their own traditional territories

Safety Planning: An Integral Part of Seeking Safety for Yourself and Others

Contributed by Melinda Radford, Circles of Healing Outreach Advocate

Many people have experienced or know someone who has experienced domestic violence and/or sexual assault. Victims and their family members, friends or acquaintances may feel empowered when they have a safety plan in place for whenever help may be needed. A safety plan is a personalized plan unique to the victim who is seeking an increased level of safety or preparing to leave their current situation. Safety plans may include various forms of safety, such as safety during a violent situation, safety when preparing to leave, safety with a restraining order and many other forms of safety, depending on the victim's needs.

Generally, a safety plan includes a checklist of items that should be taken with the victim when they leave the abusive situation. That will often include legal papers, such as restraining order, rental agreement, insurance cards, and various identification such as birth certificates, social security cards, driver's license, and other valuable items, such as car and house keys, medications, photos, clothing and personal hygiene products. Often times the victim may give money, items or documents to a trusted friend, family member or caseworker to safeguard during their transition.

Helping a victim create a safety plan assists them in evaluating their needs, creating a checklist of important items, and understanding what people, items and places are crucial for their safety. The basics of a safety plan should assist the victim in knowing their resources and taking steps to plan for minimizing risks while promoting safety. If you would like to have a confidential conversation about safety planning for yourself or a loved one, even if that person is not willing to separate from the situation, feel free to call the Circles of Healing program at (541) 888-1309.

Why Choose Foster Care? (part 2)

Contributed by Earl Boots, Family Services Program Case Manager

Angie and Danny Krossman
April 10, 2018

Mother's Day, Sunday, May 13th. I wish all Mothers, Grandmothers, Great Grandmothers a Big Happy Mother's Day! There are mothers within CTCLUSI who may not have been given our appreciation from time to time. Let's do our best to honor them every day, and even more on their Holiday. There are mothers who open their hearts and homes to children of other mothers, I am talking about our Tribal Foster Mothers, past and present. I also want to honor and recognize the sisters, aunts, grandmothers, and great-grandmothers who have taken in and raised their family member's children, to which I am personally so grateful. It is about the ability of human beings to share love.

As I shared last month I will be writing a little about CTCLUSI foster parents over the next 3 or 4 months, I hope you enjoy my second article, and maybe consider becoming a home for children in need.

We have 4 tribal community foster parents (open to all children) and 2 relative foster parents (open to relatives). With a tribal membership of just over 1,200 CTCLUSI should be very proud to have 6 foster families, who look beyond themselves to help keep children safe, included, and loved regardless the faults of their parents.

Today I was given permission to share the story of Angie and Danny Krossman on their personal journey of sharing their love with children of parents also in need of help. I first met Angie and Danny 3 years ago, when they started their foster parenting journey. Since opening their home, they have fostered 14 children. They are currently going through the process of becoming adoptive parents hoping to permanently grow their family by 3.

I was really excited when Angie and Danny agreed to meet with me, talk a bit about their foster parenting and to allow me to share with all of you in our CTCLUSI Newsletter.

The first question I asked was "Why did you choose to become foster parents?" Danny began telling a story that he has told many times:

"Angie and I were at the hospital to visit our new grandbaby, and we could not wait for our new bundle of joy to come home. Angie noticed that there were 4 other babies in the infant viewing room. She asked a nurse "When will those babies be going home," as they were born just moments apart of our grandchild. The nurse replied, "Those babies won't be going home right away for reasons not shared," Angie and I both agreed that maybe we should do something to help children in need. We made the decision to go home, get the family together and talk about becoming foster parents. Angie and I knew a DHS caseworker named Karen Cummins. So, we made contact with her and the rest is history."

I sat down on the couch, Angie sat down beside me and, Danny was herding children. I decided to start the interview with Angie. In short time, I was interrupted by foster child #1 age 3. Apparently I was sitting too close to his mother, and I needed to make room for him. After a moment Danny joined us on the couch. Danny told me, "When anyone comes over to visit, the children start "working" us, trying to get us to give them sweets". Apparently foster child #2 age 5 (FC2), carries the cute and cunning skills to maneuver himself into the right positon to get cookies. Now, I know some of you may think, well that happens in any home, but there is a scientific difference. There is a genetic connection when we are dealing with our own children, a natural mechanism of biological parents and relatives to intervene, with only "THE LOOK". Foster parents are different; they evolve into almost a hybrid human parent. Their intuition is like the Homeland Security System. You have different levels of security: Green- low risk of attack, Blue-guarded general risk of attack, Yellow- significant risk of attack, Orange- high risk and Red -severe risk of attack. I think this is why, in foster parenting classes they are told to "pick their battles."

In regards to FC2 we must have been at level Green, because Danny was able to share his insights with me about visitors in the home without the usual behavioral diversions to throw foster parents off, for a slight moment. Foster parents must also have GPS. Danny was able to locate FC2 in the kitchen without leaving the couch. This is a skill, as FC2 is shorter than the kitchen counters, he was like a submarine, not visible on the surface. Danny clearly moved into level Yellow, it was in his eyes. We continued our conversation but for some reason I didn't think Angie or Danny could hear me. I am sure we have now moved into level orange, because FC2 (cute and cunning) must have cut off our communication. I am trying to be respectful and professional, but I felt I was in an episode of Star Wars, frozen in time. But not, Danny and Angie. They were on it, like the velociraptor in the move, Jurassic Park. Yes, FC2 was trolling the kitchen. He was asked to leave the kitchen and was not happy and shared his position with auditory significance, as he stormed off into the hallway. Threat averted. With smiles on all of our faces Angie, Danny and I continued our conversation. Back to level green.

Angie and Danny talked about the progress the children have made since the first day they arrived in their home. the oldest child is doing very well in school, she is making friends and she is feeling safer than she has ever felt in her life. "Mr. cute and cunning," is the most loving child you could have in your home. And he has a heart larger than the Krossman home. Oh, he is grandpa's love. And how "Mr. move over you're too close to my mom," helps his older brother, his little nephew and of course he is the equally cute, and a family protector. Angie shared with me that the children have taught her more than she could ever teach them and that she feels that she has become a better person. Angie is thankful for Danny because of their ability to work together. It must be Love.

Angie and Danny would like other parents to consider becoming foster parents, so you too, can be given a gift beyond your current understanding.

Thank you Angie, Danny and FC1, 2 and 3.

If you get an urge to become a foster parent or have questions, feel free to give me a call, Earl Boots (541) 888-7516, your Friendly Tribal ICWA Program Case Manager, or come by and visit.

Growing Your Communication Skills

Contributed by Mike Smith, Tribal Benefits Specialist - Contact me at 541.902.3819 or at msmith@ctclusihr.org

Communication Skills – Everyone knows you need them, but how many do you need to see the best results in your career? Here are the top four communication skills to help prime you for success.

1. Excellent Speaking Skills

When most people think about communication, they think about speaking. While this area is only one part of communication, it's a very important one. Speaking well matters, whether you're a manager delivering motivational speeches to inspire your team, a bookkeeper explaining a client's financial situation, or a public relations specialist interacting with members of the media. Having good public speaking skills helps you talk to others and persuade them with your point of view. Your speaking skills will help you command others' attention. You can also showcase your excellent speaking skills during a job interview, so make the most of the opportunity.

2. Good Telephone Skills

While good speaking skills go some way toward making someone competent on the telephone, phone communication skills are skills unto their own. Without the visual clues of face-to-face communication, telephone speakers must take cues from what they're hearing and express themselves only through their voices.

The more you use the telephone, the more comfortable you'll feel. Try to resist the urge to simply text friends or book restaurant reservations online. Pick up the phone to make your arrangements instead.

Remember to speak clearly as the person you call can rely only on your words. You may also deal with people who don't want to take your call, particularly if you're cold-calling them. While they may be frustrated or even rude, you should always stay polite and friendly.

Most people will need to use the telephone to communicate at some point during their careers, but well-developed telephone skills are especially important for call center operators and advertising salespeople.

3. Strong Active Listening Skills

While speaking to others is important, you can't claim to be a good communicator unless you have good listening skills. One of the best ways to listen is a process called active listening because it reinforces what a speaker has said to you. Active listening helps clear up any areas of confusion and highlights the message in the listener's mind.

You can improve your active listening skills by practicing it when someone speaks to you, whether it's at work or during your leisure time.

- Focus on what the speaker says.
- Notice the speaker's body language.
- Wait for the speaker to finish, without interrupting.
- Ask questions to clarify any unclear points.
- Repeat the message you heard back to the speaker. Phrases such as "I understand you want to ..." and "So you're saying that ..." are good starting points.

People love when others listen to them. When you demonstrate active listening, you're making others feel valued. You're also learning what they need from you, which will help you do your job better no matter what industry you work in.

4. Exemplary Written Communication Skills

While spoken communication is important, communicating using the written word is important in many roles. While some professionals such as journalists and advertising copywriters rely heavily on their written communication skills, they're also vital for anyone who needs to prepare reports or write emails as part of their job.

Practice is one of the best ways to become a better writer. Start writing regularly on a blog or in a journal, and you'll find the process becomes less daunting and starts to feel more natural. Focus on your ideas flowing smoothly as well as mechanical concerns such as grammar and spelling. You may also want to enroll in a writing course if you feel your writing needs some special attention. Specialist business and technical writing courses can benefit people in certain industries.

Searching for a job will give you plenty of opportunities to showcase your written skills. Write a custom cover letter, e.g., customer service, for each position you apply for consideration. Make sure the letter is persuasive, concise, and free of spelling or grammatical errors that could undermine your application. Show a prospective employer that you have mastered these communication skills, and you'll prove that you could be an asset to any place of business operating in any industry.
